While only 3% of 11th grade students report using cigarettes in the past month, six times as many students (18%) report vaping in the past month.

Among high school students, 13% report that at least one of their four closest friends smokes cigarettes.

Only a quarter of students report that vaping poses a great risk, while nearly two-thirds of students believe there is great risk in smoking a pack of cigarettes.

Self-reported vaping has more than doubled among surveyed 11th grade students between 2014, when researchers first began asking about it on the Delaware School Surveys, and 2019, the most recently available data.

*Vaping refers to the use of any e-cigarettes, Juul, or any other vaping device.
